

Evolution of Irish National Records 1861-2020

Event	Note	Athlete	Competition	Venue	Date
-------	------	---------	-------------	-------	------

The task of developing a table of the Progression of the Irish National Records, from before the birth of organised Athletics in the late 19th Century up to the present day, inevitably presents the compilers with a number of difficult problems.

First, of course, is the difficulty that arises from the existence of parallel governing organisations during significant periods of this history and the practice of their maintaining non co-ordinated sets of records.

We have also needed to recognise that up until almost the last quarter of the 20th century performances achieved outside Ireland were not accorded status as Irish National Records.

Thus, most notoriously perhaps, the winning performances of Bob Tisdall and Ron Delany at the Olympics of 1932 and 1956 were never, in their day, recognised as Irish Records.

But there were many others, perhaps less prominent, which because they were achieved outside Ireland were never subjected to those levels of appropriate scrutiny which are customarily accorded to Irish record performances.

A further problem arises from the fact that until sometime in the early-1930s the National Record was deemed to be the best authenticated performance made in Ireland whether by a local athlete or by an overseas visitor.

Thus an Official List of Records published, for example, in 1924 credited Irish Records to Wyndham Halswelle (SCO., 440y), Hugh Welsh (SCO., 1 Mile), Alvin Kraenzlein (USA, 120yH), and Ralph Rose (USA, Shot Putt). The particular significance of this in the context of our project is that, therefore, a performance by an Irish athlete superior to an earlier Irish Record but inferior to that achieved by an overseas athlete, was not considered for ratification and so, not subjected to the higher levels of scrutiny customarily applied when considering whether to award the accolade of "Irish Record" to a particular performance.

The problems for the compilers was compounded by the absence or loss of archival material on the subject of Records forcing an unwelcome dependence, in many instances, on contemporary newspaper reports with all the potentials for fallibility that such dependence entails.

For these reasons, amongst others, this compilation is to be best considered, at least as concerns marks made up to the early 1970s, as an honest attempt to define an Evolution based on the principle of the Best Authentic Performance.

One further observation is appropriate to rationalise the presence in these progressions of Performances achieved by Irish athletes who are better remembered for their exploits under a different flag – that of the U.S.A. Our position here is that where an athlete was active in the sport prior to emigrating it is appropriate to take into consideration performances achieved in the period prior to his becoming a U.S. citizen. It will thus be noted that these considerations apply to the cases of James Mitchell, John Flanagan, Paddy Ryan and Con Walsh in the Hammer Throw and to Dan Ahearn in the Triple Jump.

The compilers hope is that this compilation of the achievements of Irish athletes over the past one-and-a half centuries will be of interest to followers of our sport.

We present it fully cognisant of its imperfections and in the hope that visitors to the site will be able to identify and draw attention to errors of commission or omission for which we offer, in advance, our sincere thanks.

Triple Jump, Men

The original Rules of the G.A.A. for the event known as the Hop-Step-Jump permitted the use of either a hop, step and jump or two successive hops and a jump – at the athlete's discretion. Daniel Shanahan employing the latter method achieved a distance of 50'0"1/2 at Limerick on 6th August 1888 which was ratified by the GAA as a Record and adopted also by the IAAA when the Joint Records Committee was formed some years later. And the performance remained on the Record books until well into the 1950s. For the purposes of this compilation, however, we have listed only performances known to have been achieved employing the hop-step and jump method
